Part game, part puzzle, part interactive toy, Vignettes is inspired by the 100,000 point systems from classic games and aims to be a new sort of game. You collect tiny bits from the environment and assemble them into a small object in order to score a point. The game is about creating and exploring beautiful, colour-coded worlds, using objects at your disposal to manipulate the environment. Vignettes is a game for anyone. It's easy to learn, and easy to lose yourself in. It's challenging to a fault, which should please someone with a fine attention to detail. If you want to play, relax and make something beautiful, Vignettes is for you. Vignettes is available for Windows and Mac on the Oculus Rift Platform and Oculus Home for GearVR. My 30th birthday is finally approaching. In March, it's at least two months away (but it seems far away right now). However, that doesn't mean that it's too late to gift my Canadian self with something really great and perfect for the occasion. For those of you who know my crew, you know that the vehicle in my life is the very LNER Class W1/6 No.61063 Canadian Pacific Railway Canadian National Railway Pacific Expedition 4P-9 class V-12 locomotive (incorrectly referred to as class SD60 in the NTS virtual railroading simulator, perhaps to make it look more "railroady", but it actually should have been class SD60) - an American locomotive I have been obsessed with ever since watching the TV show, GoldFlake Treehuggers. I have made two OCs of the two Canadian Pacific Railway (CPR) train simulators, but I have also made it a point to make a 3D printable version of this very locomotive too. A very unique objective for any project builder, and the CAD file is one of the best I've found on the web. From the first-person perspective, the image was not very "railroad" looking and certainly not real CG, so I referred to it as "low-cost faux", and it literally took quite a long time (well, in these days...) to get it all together. When my wife saw the graphic for the first time, she was like: "My God! That's the same as the CPR! I saw one in the 'Railroad' section at Scenic Railway Designs! What a coincidence!". She totally agreed with the "low-cost faux" part, although it also took me a while to convince her. It was really hard to print, as there were several problems where the head of the screw was wrong, and I had trouble printing them all (even the head is wrong, I could not get the whole screw out of the head in a proper position, so the only way was to print the head, which is small, but somehow I was able to print it all with 2mm ABS) First thing I did was to color the front and back lights as I could not get proper BR lamp colors from the reference photo, so I had to use a navy blue-ish color (which was cheaper than real lampshades, but hopefully I will have it in proper
